Practice workbook · Operant conditioning: rewards and punishments that shape crime

Reinforcement, punishment and primary/secondary reinforcers as an explanation of offending.

12 question parts: 1 worked-example retry and 11 further practice parts.
Name: _____ Class: _____ Date: _____

Practise one question type at a time. Attempt the part inside the red boundary; the rest of the question and any figures are kept for context. Write your working in the answer space.

The first question is a retry of the website worked example, without its solution. Check your answers online with 'Check my answer', or ask your teacher for the answer booklet.

9 The police caught Tamara driving over the legal speed limit. She was required to attend a course about the dangers of driving over the speed limit as a punishment for her offence. A month after the course, she was caught driving over the speed limit again when she was nearly involved in a road traffic accident.

Explain how negative punishment could be used to stop Tamara from driving over the speed limit in the future.

14 Maurice is 34 years old and has been stealing since he was 16 years old. He has stolen high value items such as a television, and low value items such as food. He says that stealing stops him feeling like he cannot give his family the things they deserve.

Maurice has only been caught stealing once, and was given a community sentence of two months. He says it is not worth stopping stealing because he gets lots of nice things that he enjoys. He also says that the consequence of being punished does not worry him.

Assess how well operant conditioning can explain Maurice's stealing.
