Question number	Answer	Mark
12(a)	One mark for accurate understanding of a symptom of addiction. One mark for exemplification of how a symptom of addiction can be used to explain the scenario. For example: • One symptom of addiction is that the individual will suffer from withdrawal symptoms if the substance or activity is not used for a period of time (1). If Jeremie stops using online auction sites for a period of time, he will experience withdrawal symptoms such as anxiety and irritability if he cannot go online and buy items from the internet (1). • One symptom of addiction is that there is psychological dependence where the individual feels a strong craving and need for the substance or activity (1). Jeremie will have an intense urge to use online auction sites and buy items all the time and will be constantly thinking about his next online purchase throughout the day (1). Accept any other appropriate response.	(2)

Question number	Answer	Mark
12(b)	One mark for identification of the strength / weakness (maximum two marks). One mark for justification, which must be linked to the strength / weakness identified (maximum two marks). For example: Strength • Learning theory has received support from studies, such as Bandura et al. (1961), which have found that children will observe and imitate their role models behaviour so could account for Jeremie modelling his father on online auction sites (1) as children copied aggressive behaviour from adult role models to hit and shout at a Bobo doll so could support how Jeremie observed and imitated online shopping to become addicted (1). Weakness • Learning theory does not take biological factors into account, such as genes or neurotransmitters so may not fully explain why Jeremie became addicted to online auction sites (1) because biological factors, such as a gene linked to addiction which was inherited from Jeremie's father, could have made Jeremie more vulnerable to developing an Internet addiction rather than learning theory (1). Accept any other appropriate response.	(4)

Question number	Answer	Mark
12(c)	One mark for accurate understanding of cognitive behavioural therapy (CBT). One mark for exemplification of how cognitive behavioural therapy (CBT) can be used to explain the scenario. For example: • Cognitive behavioural therapy (CBT) involves 'homework' which is where the patient practises using the new, more rational ways of thinking between sessions (1). So, Jeremie will need to practise thinking more logically about whether he needs to keep buying items from the online auction sites by focusing on what is important in his life and how many items he really needs (1). • Cognitive behavioural therapy (CBT) involves the client and therapist identifying and challenging irrational ways of thinking (1). So, Jeremie will need to work with his therapist to identify why him buying so many items from online auctions is irrational and to challenge these ways of thinking by considering how many items he really needs (1). Accept any other appropriate response.	(2)

10(a)	One mark for demonstrating accurate understanding of cognitive behavioural therapy. One mark for exemplification of how the therapy can be used for Kesia's addiction. For example: • As CBT can involve identification of any irrational beliefs and work towards more rational beliefs (1), Kesia could recognise that she can only wear one set of clothes at once so has enough already which is a more rational thought process (1). 10(b)	One mark for identification of a weakness. One mark for justification which must be linked to the weakness identified. For example: • CBT relies on Kesia wanting to change her shopping habits but she may not identify that it is a problem (1) which means that until she can recognise her shopping is a problem she will not be motivated to stop and her addiction will remain (1). Question number	Answer	Mark
12(a)	One mark for accurate understanding of cognitive theory. One mark for exemplification of how cognitive theory can be used to explain the scenario. For example: • Beck's cognitive triad suggested someone may show symptoms of depression if they have a negative view of the self, the world, and the future (1). For example, Maddie believes she will always be a failure so there is no point in work anymore, which suggests she has developed a negative view of the future (1). Accept any other appropriate response.	(2)

Question number	Answer	Mark
12(b)	One mark for identification of the strength / weakness (maximum two marks). One mark for justification, which must be linked to the strength / weakness identified (maximum two marks). For example: Strength • Cognitive theory has received support from studies, such as Evans et al. (2005), which have found women with the most negative self-beliefs were more likely to later become depressed so this could have happened to Maddie with her negative beliefs of her not getting a future promotion (1), as women with the highest negative self-schema scores were more likely to become depressed so can support Maddie becoming depressed as a result of her negative schema (1). Weakness • Cognitive theory does not take biological factors into account, such as genes or imbalanced neurotransmitters so may not fully explain why Maddie thinks work is pointless and is depressed (1) because biological factors, such as gene linked to depression, could have made Maddie more vulnerable to developing depression rather than cognitive theory because there does not appear to have been any significant negative events to activate negativity in Maddie (1). Accept any other appropriate response.	(4)

Question number	Answer	Mark
12(c)	One mark for appropriate conclusion. One mark for justification of the conclusion through analysis/interpretation. For example: • The new antidepressant 'H3-a' had less chance of relapse to depression than the standard antidepressant so may be effective for Maddie (1), which is shown by 13% less chance on average to relapse to depressed symptoms for 'H3-a' compared to standard antidepressant after 1 year (1). Accept any other appropriate response.	(2)

12(d)	One mark for accurate understanding of cognitive behavioural therapy (CBT). One mark for exemplification of how cognitive behavioural therapy (CBT) can be used to explain the scenario. For example: • Cognitive behavioural therapy (CBT) involves 'homework' which is where the patient practises using the new, more rational ways of thinking between sessions (1). So, Maddie will need to practise thinking more logically about getting a promotion by focusing on areas highlighted in her performance review and showing her boss that she has the necessary skills for a promotion (1). Accept any other appropriate response.	(2)
